Member Asia-Pacific Environmental Centre Initiative

Michael's 40 year career spans both corporate and private segments across a number industry categories. Having started, grown and successfully exited a number of businesses in his 20's and 30's Michael subsequently joined a private import distribution business as Executive Director, with specific responsibility to grow the business through new product and local acquisitions.

Representing international Companies including Bayer in Germany, Mitsubishi Gas Chemical and Lintec of Japan provided Michael with valuable hands on experience in International negotiations.

Subsequent to the sale of that business in the mid 90's, Michael established his own management and environmental business consultancy.

Quick to see patterns in external events and with a strong belief in management by measurement Michael has assisted a diverse range of local and international companies in areas such as product development and market strategy, structural reform, capital raising as well as identifying and securing successful exit strategies.

Projects have included greenfield developments, infrastructure, tech based start-ups, preparing companies for an IPO and following through with investment and management expertise.

Working with organisations to prepare and educate senior executives of the importance to work on and execute a corporate strategy with succession planning including trade sales across local and international markets.

Michael limits creative management activities to working with a small number of organisations and investigating selected environmental mining waste management projects.

He is now focused on helping government and the mining industry across Australasia to clean up the waste left behind from various mining activities. He is concentrating on the Australasian region through the Asia-Pacific Environmental Centre Initiative and his agency for the Itronics Inc. Rock Kleen technology.
